

Repayment Strategies for New Podiatrists

2014 APMA Young Physicians' Institute

Saturday, October 11, 2014

One of the challenges more than a few new podiatrists face is how to choose a repayment strategy for their student loans that helps them best meet their own personal repayment and career objectives. This can be exacerbated by the complexities associated with the loans themselves and their repayment options that seem to be constantly changing.

The APMA Young Physicians' Institute is delighted to welcome Paul Garrard, founder and president of PGPresents, LLC, an independent student loan consulting company, to speak with attendees about repayment strategies for new podiatrists.

Mr. Garrard is one of the most well-known and in-demand experts on educational debt management in the nation, especially for health sciences graduates. He has worked in higher education financing in both the public and private sectors for more than 30 years, and has worked with thousands of health professions' students, residents, and new physicians, including podiatrists. He is pleased to be sharing his expertise with APMA members at the Young Physicians' Institute.

Mr. Garrard is planning to cover the following topics during this important student loan update:

- How to choose a repayment strategy for your student loans that meets your individual repayment and career objectives
- Recent and proposed changes that may impact your repayment strategy as a new podiatrist, and what to watch for
- Consolidation, including advantages and disadvantages, how to know if you are a candidate for consolidation, and why consolidation may not be needed for many new podiatrists
- How private student loans may impact your repayment strategy

You will not want to miss this dynamic and highly interactive discussion workshop!

Should you have topics or questions you would like him to address at the workshop, please feel free to contact Mr. Garrard directly at paul@PGPresents.com. Please sure to identify yourself as an upcoming attendee at the 2014 APMA Young Physicians' Institute.
